Introduction

SITC issued its third annual report of “Evaluation of Governmental Disclosure Levels” prepared by “Transparency and Accountability program”. The report evaluates the proactive disclosure and the efficiency of digital structure for 24 ministerial websites. The report launch comes after one year of issuing the “National Strategy to Fight Corruption 2014 – 2018” by the Egyptian Government, in which; the availability of information formed one of its main axes; in order to sustain integrity, transparency and accountability. After one year -which represents the quarter of the strategy period- little or no progress was noticed in the area of information disclosure by Egyptian ministries, comparing to the report findings in 2014.

Proactive Disclosure was evaluated by 26 criteria with 4 points each, making a total of 104 evaluation points. These criteria evaluated the availability of information, the completion of information, the understandability of information, and the updating of information. Websites Digital Structure was evaluated by 22 criteria evaluating the website browsing ability, performance, and privacy protection for users.

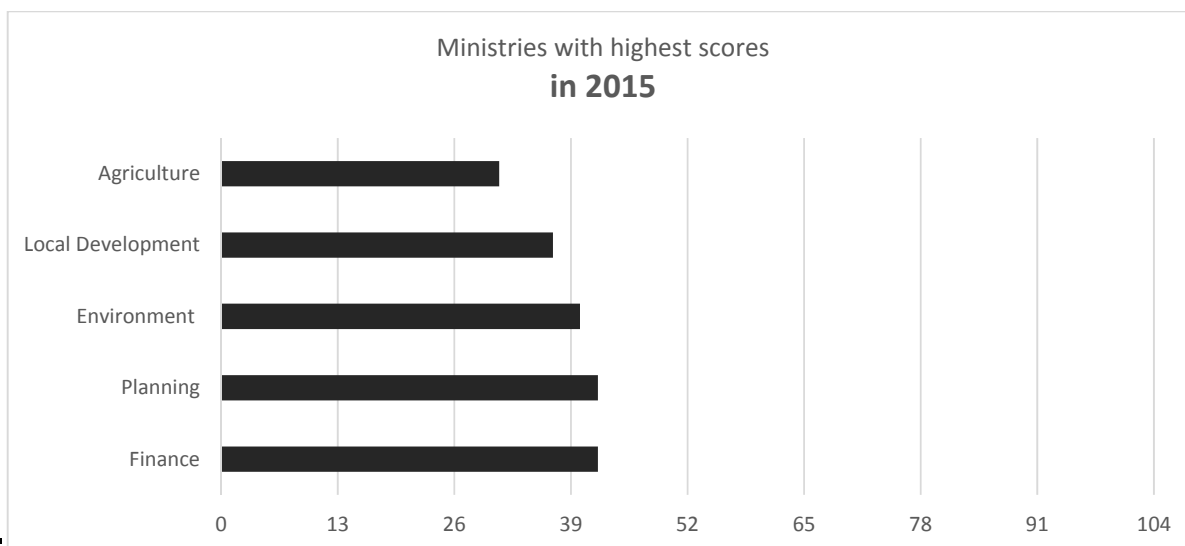

In Proactive Disclosure, Ministry of Finance and Ministry of Planning held first place with 42 points from a total of 104 points.
